KIMBERLY STREATER
Community Mental Health Ambassador

Kimberly Streater is a Community Mental Health Ambassador with the Department of Psychiatry in the New Haven Center for Wellbeing for Women and Mothers at Yale School of Medicine. As a survivor of domestic violence she sought out employment in a position where she could work helping to rebuild the community by engaging and supporting mothers in need. She is a mom of six children whom understands the stressors single moms face on a daily basis. She has watched her children persevere through many transitions in life, and each has a different personality which keeps her very balanced. She is a basketball mom so her evenings consist of either practices or games.
