"Blinded by insight: Self-assessment and its role in performance improvement"

Kevin Eva, Ph.D.
Sr. Scientist & Acting Director of the Centre for Health Education Scholarship
Director of Educational Research & Scholarship in the Department of Medicine
University of British Columbia

Dr. Eva is the Editor-in-Chief for the journal Medical Education. His current research interests are broadly defined within the context of research into educational practices within the health professions. They include research into the value and limits of subjectivity as a means of assessing performance, the promotion and assessment of non-academic characteristics in professional practice, the context specific nature of performance, the conceptualization, nature, and use of self-assessment, the psychological processes that impact upon one’s responsiveness to feedback, and the nature of clinical expertise. He maintains a number of international appointments including the University of Maastricht and the University of Bern and has consulted broadly around the globe including advisory roles for the American Board of Internal Medicine and National Health Services Education. He is founding co-director of the Maastricht-Canadian Masters of Health Professional Education program.
